FREE FROM AVAILABILITY

A new HospitalityGEM survey has found that 89% of consumers feel that the availability of 'free from' foods when eating out has improved, with 72% recognising restaurants for providing the best choice of dishes. Vegetarianism is the number one special dietary requirement and shellfish is the most avoided food, receiving 44% of the vote. However, the survey found that 58% of people feel that while the ingredients in dishes are clearly communicated by eating operators, there is room for improvement.
